

Master of Arts in Autism Spectrum Disorders

SERVE STUDENTS IN NEED

Help those in need live better lives while enhancing your career in the classroom with Grand Canyon University's new Master of Arts in Autism Spectrum Disorders degree.

If you're inspired to touch the lives of disadvantaged children as a special education teacher, the Master of Arts in Autism Spectrum Disorders could be your calling. Employment for special education teachers is expected to increase by 26,000 jobs nationally through 2022.

OUR DEGREE PROGRAM OFFERS:

- 32 credits (11 courses): Approximately 16 months to completion.
- 8 of 11 courses focus on serving students with ASD.
- 65 hours of required clinical field experience allows learners essential in-classroom experience within one or more schools.
- Capstone course allows learners to design, implement and evaluate an action-oriented research project based around ASD.

WHY GCU IS RIGHT FOR YOU:

- Earn your degree 100% online, allowing you the flexibility to attend class and complete coursework on your schedule
- Numerous scholarships and financial aid options
- Learn from academically prepared faculty and collaborate with peers in our vibrant online learning community
- Christian perspective allows you to integrate your faith into practice

For more information visit gcu.edu/college-of-education

For questions about any GCU program including a free credit assessment and Net Price Calculator please contact :

Ryan Radziwon
(512) 547-0666
Ryan.Radziwon@gcu.edu